Bit of Startling News Just Discovered

Peking, April 1. 1965.-Your correspond ent takes peculiar pleasure in sending the following story. In the first place, i publication in the two hemispheres which will get the news, because the affair it question was of such an ultra select nature that no mere foreign corresponden could have got in. Learning that the Czur of Russia was actually to be pres ent, I considered in what guise I could be most cordially received, if at all, and after a good deal of thought got myself up as the Dr. Schenck. The result was that the cast himself received me with great affability and said that he had read in the papers that I was dead, and was delightfully disappointed, and so wished the boss could see me-and four, inside my watch-lid.

But that isn't the story, by any means astonished at my off-hand account of meeting the exar in Peking. To tell the truth, I started this story by putting the cart before the horse-having just come from meeting the Czar of Russia I may be excused for being in a stew. The only other time I ever met a czar was when I met the Czar of the Tenderloin, and then would you believe that was a lesson to China has a new emperor! It seems to tective-you know so much. me that this news should burst on a Has been used for over FIFTY YEARS | the blue. It is a great bit of news-just me with three Manchu executioners looking at me suspiciously, and therefore done literally under fear of death, which accounts, perhaps, for the general crumminess of the drawing. Now the cat's out of the bag! The new Emperor of China? Of course. It's the Smith, alian Schenck?"

So, said I to When the crown was on the Coasacks Caberne, fourth floor Winne building, myself, this time the Russian mountain fired off a saive without maiming any one es to the foreignly corresponding and the Manchus cheered pathe a chatty, snappy line of small talk fit supposed to be the Emperor of China for publication, no more piteous letters. So there was a great scene of hist was with the intention of taking an in-terview from the czar that I set out decked majesty chucked the crownever, that I might also run into an interprepared. That is, I were a chain mail shirt, an extra high razor-proof collar, and as I walked my pockets fingled merrily-replete with every known antidote. On my way I framed up a few modest questions, which I intended to introduce artfully into my interview with his ma-run something like this; First-Your mujesty does not want any more foreign consuls admitted into easterumost Russia (vulgariy called Manchu and Pacific coast regions the week has ria), because why? Is it because consuls been abnormally cool, with heavy frosts have a way of insisting on appearing at functions in the middle of the day in evening clothes and thus surround their several governments with a false glam or? Do you approve of evening dress in the middle of the day? Of decollete;
